

Vandita Sharma, a senior officer of the Indian Administrative Service, is currently the India Country Director of Education Development Center and the Chief of Party for the USAID-supported education technology project. She has 17 years of service, holding various mid to senior level positions in the Government of Karnataka and the Government of India. She was the Project Director, District Primary Education Program for Karnataka where the focus was on providing quality education at primary level to the most remote and underserved areas. Ms. Sharma has a Masters degree in English Literature from Punjab University and a Masters degree in Development Management from the Asian Institute of Management, Manila.